The pumper and several firemen with Chief Frost answered an emergency call to Oxford, Monday at 12:30 p. m., to handle a fire that burned one small house to the ground and started a blaze on the roof of Josiah S. Witham's farm buildings on the state highway between Norway and Welchville. Flames from the small building on the Oxford road spread into the fields and woods, and burning embers were carried by the high wind to Mr. Witham's shingle roof, fifty rods away. The booster tank handled the roof blaze and 500 feet of hose was laid from a brook while fighting in the woods and fields.

The Mellie Dunham Building Fund

Contributions to assist Mellie Dunham in erecting new buildings to replace the homestead lost by fire are coming in slowly. A million dollar donation is not expected, but a good number of small sums would materially help the famous couple to replace their loss.

Other gifts besides money have been sent for the furnishing of the new home. This shows the right spirit. Every article is treasured by Mellie and Gram as a personal message of love.

Checks should be made payable to Mellie Dunham and sent to the Norway Advertiser Office.

Will Greet Friends

On Eighty-Ninth Birthday, Next Saturday

Mrs. Rebecca T. Daboll expects to celebrate her 89th birthday on Patriots' Day and proposes to greet friends who may call and extend congratulations. Cards and gifts are arriving by mail to cheer the shut-in and bring a touch of the outside world.

Mrs. Daboll is confined to a couch and wheel chair at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ella Ham, Pleasant Street, but is cheerful and happy. Eleven months ago she fell and broke her hip and shoulder, and for weeks was confined in a hospital. Able to walk but little, she derives pleasure from making fancy articles, knitting and crocheting. Much of her handiwork is given as a contribution to the Universalist fair and needless to say, the articles find ready buyers. She is generous with her friends and sends out many gifts made during lonely hours.

Mrs. Daboll was born in South Redding now Wakefield, Mass., April 19, 1841, the daughter of Jotham and Sally Walton. She is the last of nine children. Much of her early life was spent in Northboro and other places in Massachusetts. She came to Norway thirty-nine years ago, then lived for a time in Waterford. Mrs. Daboll has a son, William Foster, in Muskogee, Oklahoma, and a daughter, with whom she lives; four grandchildren; four great grandchildren and a great, great grandson two years old. So she represents the head of five generations living.

Not especially anxious to return to the so-called, good old days; she observes from her window dress styles that would be daring when she was a girl, but perfectly proper today. Mrs. Daboll has lived to see the fulfillment of a prophecy uttered by her father forty-odd years ago. He said, "A time is coming when people will fly about in airships, like birds."

Her mind is alert and she keeps in touch with important events. Cultivating the friendship, and being in personal contact with young people is her motto and a sure remedy to ward off the "grouches" in advanced age.

A NEW VACATION LAND

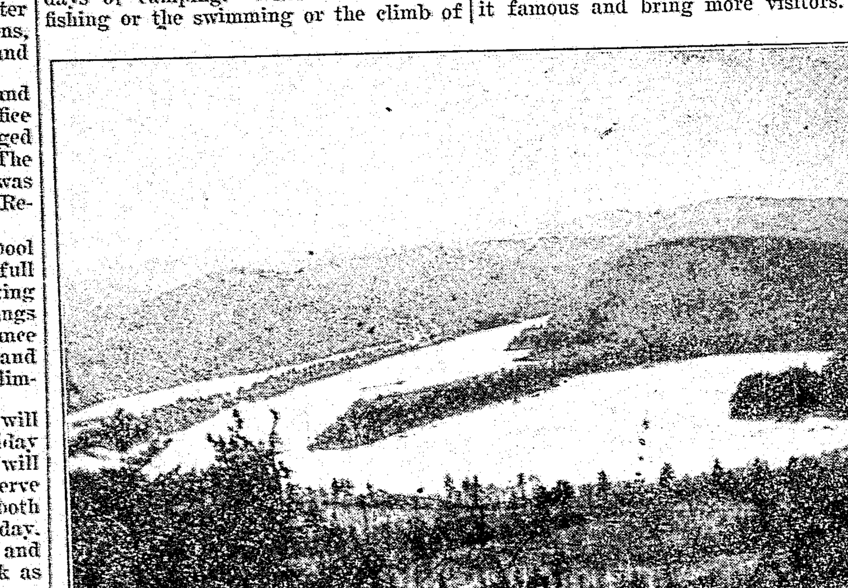

AN ATTRACTIVE SPOT FOR SUMMER COTTAGES, LOCATED IN THE TOWNS OF WATERFORD, LOVELL AND EAST STONEHAM

If Ponce de Leon were living today and had come upon the Pentekezar Lakes, he would not have failed to find waters in which to renew his youth. If you should look on the map in the northern part of the town of Waterford, Oxford County, you would find these lakes marked "The Five Kezar Ponds". But that map was made before the lakes were rechristened last year on an August night when the moonlight danced upon the waters and the hills rang with the heart song of a boys' campfire circle:

Pentekezar, ever, thy name we hail.
Pentekezar, never, shall thy braves fail,
'Til deep beneath the waters of Pentekezar
Thy hills are hidden.

The boys had discovered the wonder of the Pentekezar Lakes in the four or five days of camping. Whether it was the fishing or the swimming or the climb of the North Waterford road out from Norway up into the village, and then its a beautiful two mile ride to the first lake. Some day the level fields of this location will be the property of some lucky owner of a boys' and girls' camp. Three-quarters of a mile of road off to the right will take you to the heart of the Lakes. Some day, not very far hence, an automobile road will follow an old trail to two more ponds where the fishing is good, Cushman's and Allen's Ponds. The fishing in Pentekezar Lakes is good now and will be better soon, for they are to be restocked.

At the outlet of these ponds is Kezar Falls. With its Basin, it rivals the Agassiz Basins of the White Mountains. Some poet should write about it to make it famous and bring more visitors. He the mountains or the starlight nights or the dusk of the morn when the deer came out to drink that was the discovery, they are not able to tell. You must find out for yourself.

The winter picture above does not do justice to the Lakes. If you visit there in summer, you will find sandy beaches, gentle bays and inlets, narrow peninsulas cutting the Lakes in thirds and designed by some great Lover of Beauty. The lakes hide from each other around a point of land or through a sudden break in the land as if to furnish a thrill for every turn of the boat. Tree covered shores recede to meet the encircling mountains that act as sentinels against the encroachment of civilization upon the Sacred Quiet.

Get into your car when the roads are good and go exploring yourself. Take could tell how an Indian chased an unarmed white man to the chasm of these falls, where a desperate leap saved the white man's life. Doubtless he might find other lore in these hills for his poem.

The Pentekezar Lakes Development Company has been recently formed with Will Ray of North Waterford as president. Harry Brown of South Paris and Fred Hersey of North Waterford are also in the company. This company proposes to open the property around these lakes at prices more reasonable than can be found anywhere in this section. Here is a fine opportunity for a picnic or excursion on some warm day of the summer months and at the end of the road you will find a Paradise, not made with hands, and maybe, a place to come year after year for rest and recreation—B. F. W., North Waterford.

Ice Is Out

Pennesseewassee Lake Cleared of Ice, Monday

The sudden warm spell beginning last week after the rise of water started something on Lake Pennesseewassee. Open water in spots on Sunday was a forerunner of the big event that needed only the high northwest wind, Monday forenoon to churn up the shell ice and cause, the annual mysterious disappearance. There was no sudden rush for boats owing to rough weather and rougher water.

Edith R. McIntire

On Thursday, April 10, nearly a hundred people gathered at Greenfields to pay a last tribute to Edith R. McIntire. In spite of almost impassable roads, friends and relatives came from all parts, even as far as Newry. Letters, telegrams and flowers, were sent from a great many unable to be present.

Mrs. McIntire died of pneumonia on April 8, after an illness of five days. To her host of friends it seemed impossible that her busy hands were quiet. She had always been very active in Grange affairs; and was also a member of Evergreen Rebekah Lodge of North Waterford. She also helped in the work of the Oxford County United Parish. Many a person in distress has been helped by her kind words and useful gifts.

As Edith R. Sawin she was born Jan. 31, 1861, and grew to womanhood on Sawin Hill, North Waterord. Her parents were Chloe Elizabeth (Sampson) and Thomas Hubbard Sawin. After her marriage to Leslie E. McIntire on Feb. 1, 1880, her home was in Harrison for a few years. Then the young couple stayed with the Justin McIntires while the home where they have since lived was being built.

On Feb. 1, 1930, Mr. and Mrs. McIntire celebrated their golden wedding. Besides the host of friends gathered at that time, there were the son and daughter, Clayton S. McIntire and Lulu G. Pinkham, the grandchildren, Myron S. and Mary McIntire. These, as well as a sister, Mrs. Alice E. McIntire, a niece and nephew, a grand nephew and two grand nieces, survive her.

Funeral services, at the home, were in charge of Rev. A. C. Townsend. Prayer was offered by Rev. Marguerite McIntire. The bearers were Clayton S. McIntire, Glenn R. McIntire, R. Eugene Pinkham, and Norton S. Jillson. Burial was in the family lot in the Bisbeetown cemetery. A great quantity of flowers made a fitting surrounding for one who loved all beautiful growing things.

The ceremony took place Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Curtis home. Rev. F. Aldrich of the Methodist Episcopal Church officiated, using the double ring service. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, the color scheme being carried out in pink and white.

The bridal procession descended the stairway to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, and were met at the arch way by the bridegroom and his attendant, who was his brother, Warren Knightly of Norway. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was very charming in her ivory crepe back satin gown, cut on ling lines and carrying a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies. Her long veil was arranged in cap style and caught with orange blossoms. The bride's maid of honor was her cousin, Miss Wilma D. Calef of Norway, a student at Nasson Institute at Springvale. She wore a dress of rose satin combined with lace, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Little Natalie Howe of Norway, another cousin of the bride, acted as flower girl and ring bearer, carrying a basket of pink roses and snapdragons. The ring being concealed in a rose. Her dress was of coral pink silk.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the families of the bridal couple and some of their more intimate friends. Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held which was attended by a large number of guests Mr. and Mrs. Knightly were assisted in receiving by their attendants.

Norman and Verne Knightly, brother of the groom, acted as ushers, and Miss Louise Knightly, a sister, had charge of the guest book.

Following the reception, the couple left amid the best wishes of their host of friends for a wedding trip. The bride's traveling costume was a navy blue suit and hat with a gray fur piece and gray accessories.

Mrs. Knightly is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis and is one of Winthrop's most popular and talented young ladies. She is a graduate of Winthrop high school in the class of 1928 and attended Bates College. She has studied piano and the pipe organ under the direction of Carl Jean Tolman.

Mr. Knightly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Knightly, a graduate of Norway high school and of Bates College. For three years he served as submaster and athletic director at Winthrop high school where he was a very popular teacher and was highly respected by his pupils, the school authorities and the townspeople. At present he is principal of the Pittsburgh, N. H. high school and they will reside in Pittsburgh.

THOUGHTS OF SPRING

By Mrs. Dana E. McAllister

What are we thinking of
In these days of storm and showers?
Green leaves, green grass,
And apple blossom flowers?
The blue jay's call?
The cawing of the crow?
The swelling of the buds?
The sharpening of the hoe?
The little chickens in the pen,
Running to and fro?
The silent growing of the rose?
Underneath the snow?
The sawing of the wood pile?
Tapping maple trees?
Planting of tomato seeds?
The buzzing of the bees?
O, the thoughts of spring will get you
Long before it's time, you know,
You'll be thinking of the daffodils
Underneath the snow.
Thinking of the warmer days
That are coming later on.
The weeding of the garden,
The hoeing of the corn.
Thinking of the berry patch,
Upon a sunny hill,
Of the luscious strawberries,
Just one, your mouth will fill.
Thinking of the earth's warm breast,
The sunshine, rain, and showers,
The little rills, the tinkling brook,
What dear, sweet thoughts are ours.
Thinking of the tasks to do,
The turning of the sod.
As Spring draws nearer day by day,
We'll be thinking more of God.

A FIRST SPRING VISIT

Toward Taurus' starry zone, the sun
His glad ascent is making,
Smiling on each and every one,
And nature re-awaking.
Right in my room he came and peeked
Early this April morning,
With patch of radiance golden streaked
The wall and window awning.
Delight and gladness thrilled me through
On Phoebus' first Spring visit,
My breast was filled with hope anew
And stirred with joy exquisite.
And all day long I've felt the charm
Of day-king's brightness cheering,
For now each morn, with radiance warm,
He'll in my room come peering.
—FATHER CASSIDY, Ottawa, Canada.

A FOREIGN RAIN

When skies are gray as they are today
And I know not where to turn,
Then I realize with sad, misty eyes
That for home I long and yearn.
The starless sky, the towers on high
Hold no appeal for me;
Oh! for trees and grass! I'm a country lass;
That's where I ought to be.
Then when skies are gray, they ne'er dismay
For I love the rain at home,
Were I out today, I'd just run away
From the world—and be alone.

Tamarack Talk

Music makes an incursion in our column this week. Music after all, is many times, if not always, the outgrowth of poetry—of beautiful and spiritual thought. Music is and should be the final expression of the words. Music brings out the meaning of the words by various moods and tempos which in vigorous or quiet rhythms may suggest tragedy, or calm and peace. But always, as in the case of the greater compositions, there are words to be enhanced by the skillful arrangement of voice or instrument or both.

In a city where industrial activities are predominatingly prominent and where it would seem there exists a lack of love for cultivation and enrichment of the nobler things of life, opportunity was recently afforded the citizens to accept or reject an evening's respite from the realm of modern jazz and entertainment. That about one thousand persons chose to listen to the presentation of two oratorios in preference to a night at the club or the theatres proves that a love for and a consciousness of beauty still exists, in spite of what some would like to have us think.

An oratorio is a sacred work usually based upon some Biblical legend, tale or miracle, and presents a type of musical that should be even harder for some moderns to undergo. But the love and the patience of 250, who comprised the vocal chorus on this occasion is proof indeed that we are still seeking to find the beautiful, and are actually becoming conscious of Truth through music and poetry.

Poetry and music go hand in hand. For some poetry is "words that sing," for others music is poetry. But all true poetry must have a certain rhythm to it, a swing that marks it apart from ordinary words. Poetry may be the tones of actual speech, yet a jumble of trite words in rhyme conveys to the thinking reader or listener no sense of beauty or truth. Samuel Taylor Coleridge said that prose consists of "words in their best order," while poetry is "the best words in the best order."

Yet unless the public is some way stirred by sound of poetry and gradually comes to listen intelligently to poems, it will be bound down as it has been for years, unable to catch the worth of a poem except by the written word. The radio, however, may turn out to be the means of getting people more poetry conscious, guiding them away from the idea that poetry is lifeless, a thing of the past to be relegated into obscurity with older bygone institutions.

That poetry has been read more often than spoken makes the limitations in accepting and learning more about it, for, the many can ordinarily comprehend the spoken word with ease compared to the problem of digesting quickly from a mere single reading of a poem. So it has come that only those especially interested in the movement in modern poetry have grown up both reading and hearing it, while the great majority need to hear the expression of the words to really understand, from the inflection, what the words actually are meant to convey.

ESSAY CONTEST

Open to School Children of Maine

Announcement has recently been made of an essay contest, with prizes aggregating $200.00, open to all the school children of Maine, on the subject, "Why Maine is the State of My Opportunity". This contest is being sponsored by B. Peck Company, Lewiston, in connection with the celebration of its Golden Jubilee.

Two classes of prizes are offered, class A for pupils of high schools and academies, and class B for elementary school children. The prizes in class A are, 1st, $25.00, 2nd, $20.00, 3rd, $15.00 and ten prizes of $5.00 each for the ten next best. Prizes in class B are, 1st, $20.00, 2nd $15.00, 3rd $10.00, with ten prizes of $5.00 each for the ten next best.

The judges will be Hon. William Tudor Gardiner, Governor of Maine; Mrs. Edna Hutchins, President of the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs; Hon. Arthur G. Staples, Editor of The Lewiston Evening Journal; Hon. Bertrand E. Packard, Commissioner of Education and Prof. E. M. Wright, head of the English Department at Bates College.

Contest rules are being mailed to superintendents, teachers, and also may be secured on application to the Contest Editor, B. Peck Company, Lewiston, Maine. The closing date will be May 15th.

The contest was inspired by the experience of the founder of the Peck perience of the founder of the Peck Company, Bradford Peck, who came to Lewiston 50 years ago, at the age of 27, giving up employment in another State, where he was getting a salary of $5,000 a year, to open a store in Lewiston. How well his faith in Maine was justified, the Pecks of today testify.

ARBOR DAY, MAY NINTH

Governor Gardiner has proclaimed May 9th as Arbor Day. The proclamation is as follows:

"Among our natural resources, tree have had and will always have a place of first importance. Maine is the Pine Tree State and upon its seal a pine tree symbolizes the unfailing source of the prosperity and happiness of our people.

"In the very beginning of this State, when the men of Maine went down to the sea in ships, our greatest trees furnished both carriers and cargoes. Today, with 78 percent of our area in forested lands, the further development of our commerce and industry depends upon the conservation of these gifts of nature.

"It is our duty and high privilege as citizens to leave nothing undone to secure to those who come after us the same material benefits and the same beauty and refreshment in our trees and forests that we now enjoy.

"To this end, therefore, and in accordance with a wise law of the state, I hereby proclaim Friday, May 9, 1930, Arbor Day in this State of Maine, and ask that this day be fittingly observed throughout the State, not only in the schools, but wherever citizens shall gather in the interest of our common welfare."

GROW GOOD PULLETS

"We're sold on this project by actual experience," W. Warren Chadbourne said in speaking of the Grow Good Pullets campaign now being sponsored in Maine by leading poultrymen and assisted by H. L. Richardson, poultry extension specialist, Orono. "Some of it is sad and all of it valuable," he continued. "Let's go over the first two points of the program together, while I tell you of some of the experiences which have ground into us a belief in the essential soundness of the methods advocated.

"First, 'Hatch Chicks Early.'

"For over 20 years we have been urging our baby chick customers to get their chicks early. Year by year we have seen an increasing trend toward the earlier hatches. This has been especially true since the value of Cod Liver Oil in feeding chicks has become known. In fact, the value of early hatching seems so well established in the minds of poultry keepers generally that it hardly needs to be greatly stressed. I would not minimize the point, however. It is one of the fundamental requirements for success.

"Second: 'Secure Chicks from Pullorum Disease Free Stock.' "Pullorum disease, you know, is what we formerly called Bacillary White Diarrhea. Two years ago as we were expanding our hatching business, we thought it would be a good thing to be on the Accredited List just for its advertising value. We had had low mortality in the chicks we had hatched and really had no idea that any reactors (Infected birds) would be found in our flock. So you can imagine the shock when word came from Orono that nine of our hens had reacted. We didn't believe it was right. We were from Missouri. We had to be shown. And we were!

"We devised what we thought a good way to check up on the laboratory test. We placed the nine reacting birds in a pen remote from our other hens, nested them with a cockerel we were willing to sacrifice and saved some of their eggs from which on January 4 we hatched 26 chicks. In the meantime the nine reactors and the cockerel had been marketed. These 26 chicks were apparently healthy, grew well, and were finally marketed when they reached broiler size, without one of them showing the slightest symptom of disease.

"Was it not natural to suppose if we got such results with the chicks of reactors we were safe in hatching and selling chicks from the non-reactors? We certainly thought so and so did others to whom we related our experience, but right here, we made one of our biggest blunders and let ourselves in for one of the most costly experiences which ever came our way.

"The first two hatches following this "test" went all right. With both the chicks which were kept at home and those which were sold, mortality was satisfactorily small. But the third hatch was a different matter. Some of those chicks were sold and some kept at home. Word soon began to come from some of the customers that they were losing chicks. Investigation showed that something serious indeed was the matter with that lot of chicks. Our own chicks started dying and we sent specimens to Orono for diagnosis. Mortality in our own flock and in some of those we had sold became very heavy, in some cases rising over 50 per cent before the epidemic ran its course, besides stunting many of the survivors. In the meantime, another hatch was coming off. What to do? Well, our customers, knowing the facts, were willing to take the chicks with the understanding that we were standing back of them.

"The first report from Orono was inconclusive. We had made the mistake of sending dead birds instead of sick ones. So we sent another lot and in a few days word came that they had isolated the Pullorum organism. That, of course, was conclusive. We decided it was time to take our licking and have it over with.

"We now turned to the Extension Service for a copy of the Accredited List. From this we selected from flocks from which we secured eggs to fill orders for baby chicks already taken and to start our own new flock. Then we cleared out and cleaned up one of our brooder houses and when the chicks hatched which we were to raise, we put all the old stock under strict quarantine. By this means we were able to keep the new flock clean so that the next fall we got them accredited.

"In the meantime we were making good as best we could the losses of our customers. All together we lost several hundred dollars by not accepting the verdict of the Agricultural College in the first place. So we say "Amen" to point 2, 'Secure Chicks from Pullorum Disease Free Stock.' "

It was Mrs. Davis' birthday the day before so in behalf of the society, Mrs. Dora Jackson presented her a five dollar gold piece, bearing the date of her birth, a sum of money, and an Easter lily, for which Mrs. Davis thanked them for the loving thought that prompted the gift.

THOUGHTS OF SPRING

By Mrs. Dana E. McAllister

What are we thinking of
In these days of storm and showers?
Green leaves, green grass,
And apple blossom flowers?
The blue jay's call?
The cawing of the crow?
The swelling of the buds?
The sharpening of the hoe?
The little chickens in the pen,
Running to and fro?
The silent growing of the rose?
Underneath the snow?
The sawing of the wood pile?
Tapping maple trees?
Planting of tomato seeds?
The buzzing of the bees?
O, the thoughts of spring will get you
Long before it's time, you know,
You'll be thinking of the daffodils
Underneath the snow.
Thinking of the warmer days
That are coming later on.
The weeding of the garden,
The hoeing of the corn.
Thinking of the berry patch,
Upon a sunny hill
Of the luscious strawberries,
Just one, your month will fill.
Thinking of the earth's warm breast,
The sunshine, rain, and showers,
The little rills, the tinkling brook,
What dear, sweet thoughts are ours.
Thinking of the tasks to do,
The turning of the sod,
As Spring draws nearer day by day,
We'll be thinking more of God.

A FIRST SPRING VISIT

Toward Taurus' starry zone, the sun
His glad ascent is making,
Smiling on each and every one,
And nature re-awaking.
Right in my room he came and peeked
Early this April morning,
With patch of radiance golden streaked
The wall and window awning.
Delight and gladness thrilled me through
On Phoebus' first Spring visit,
My breast was filled with hope anew
And stirred with joy exquisite.
And all day long I've felt the charm
Of day-king's brightness cheering,
For now each morn, with radiance warm,
He'll in my room come peering.

—FATHER CASSIDY, Ottawa, Canada.
April 8, 1930.

A FOREIGN RAIN

When skies are gray as they are today
And I know not where to turn,
Then I realize with sad, misty eyes
That for home I long and yearn.
The starless sky, the towers on high
Hold no appeal for me;
Oh! for trees and grass! I'm a country lass;
That's where I ought to be.
Even when skies are gray, they ne'er dismay
For I love the rain at home,
Were I out today, I'd just run away
From the world—and be alone.

Tamarack Talk

Music makes an incursion in our column this week. Music after all, is many times, if not always, the outgrowth of poetry—of beautiful and spiritual thought. Music is and should be the final expression of the words. Music brings out the meaning of the words by various moods and tempos which in vigorous or quiet rhythms may suggest tragedy, or calm and peace. But always, as in the case of the greater compositions, there are words to be enhanced by the skillful arrangement of voice or instrument or both.

In a city where industrial activities are predominatingly prominent and where it would seem there exists a lack of love for cultivation and enrichment of the nobler things of life, opportunity was recently afforded the citizens to accept or reject an evening's respite from the realm of modern jazz and entertainment. That about one thousand persons chose to listen to the presentation of two oratorios in preference to a night at the club or the theatres proves that a love for and a consciousness of beauty still exists, in spite of what some would like to have us think.

An oratorio is a sacred work usually based upon some Biblical legend, tale or miracle, and presents a type of musical that should be even harder for some moderns to undergo. But the love and the patience of 250, who comprised the vocal chorus on this occasion is proof indeed that we are still seeking to find the beautiful, and are actually becoming conscious of Truth through music and poetry.

Poetry and music go hand in hand. For some poetry is "words that sing," for others music is poetry. But all true poetry must have a certain rhythm to it, a swing that marks it apart from ordinary words. Poetry may be the tones of actual speech, yet a jumble of trite words in rhyme conveys to the thinking reader or listener no sense of beauty or truth. Samuel Taylor Coleridge said that prose consists of "words in their best order," while poetry is "the best words in the best order."

Yet unless the public is some way stirred by sound of poetry and gradually comes to listen intelligently to poems, it will be bound down as it has been for years, unable to catch the worth of a poem except by the written word. The radio, however, may turn out to be the means of getting people more poetry conscious, guiding them away from the idea that poetry is lifeless, a thing of the past to be relegated into obscurity with older bygone institutions.

That poetry has been read more often than spoken makes the limitations in accepting and learning more about it, for, the many can ordinarily comprehend the spoken word with ease compared to the problem of digesting quickly from a mere single reading of a poem. So it has come that only those especially interested in the movement in modern poetry have grown up both reading and hearing it, while the great majority need to hear the expression of the words to really understand, from the inflection, what the words actually are meant to convey.

—Henry Davis Nadig.

ESSAY CONTEST

Open to School Children of Maine

Announcement has recently been made of an essay contest, with prizes aggregating $200.00, open to all the school children of Maine, on the subject, "Why Maine is the State of My Opportunity". This contest is being sponsored by B. Peck Company, Lewiston, in connection with the celebration of its Golden Jubilee.

Two classes of prizes are offered, class A for pupils of high schools and academies, and class B for elementary school children. The prizes in class A are, 1st, $25.00, 2nd, $20.00, 3rd, $15.00 and ten prizes of $5.00 each for the ten next best. Prizes in class B are, 1st, $20.00, 2nd $15.00, 3rd $10.00, with ten prizes of $5.00 each for the ten next best.

The judges will be Hon. William Tudor Gardiner, Governor of Maine; Mrs. Edna Hutchins, President of the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs; Hon. Arthur G. Staples, Editor of The Lewiston Evening Journal; Hon. Bertrand E. Packard, Commissioner of Education and Prof. E. M. Wright, head of the English Department at Bates College.

Contest rules are being mailed to superintendents, teachers, and also may be secured on application to the Contest Editor, B. Peck Company, Lewiston, Maine. The closing date will be May 15th.

The contest was inspired by the experience of the founder of the Peck perience of the founder of the Peck Company, Bradford Peck, who came to Lewiston 50 years ago, at the age of 27, giving up employment in another State, where he was getting a salary of $5,000 a year, to open a store in Lewiston. How well his faith in Maine was justified, the Pecks of today testify.

ARBOR DAY, MAY NINTH

Governor Gardiner has proclaimed May 9th as Arbor Day. The proclamation is as follows:

"Among our natural resources, tree have had and will always have a place of first importance. Maine is the Pine Tree State and upon its seal a pine tree symbolizes the unfailing source of the prosperity and happiness of our people.

"In the very beginning of this State, when the men of Maine went down to the sea in ships, our greatest trees furnished both carriers and cargoes. Today, with 78 percent of our area in forested lands, the further development of our commerce and industry depends upon the conservation of these gifts of nature.

"It is our duty and high privilege as citizens to leave nothing undone to secure to those who come after us the same material benefits and the same beauty and refreshment in our trees and forests that we now enjoy.

"To this end, therefore, and in accordance with a wise law of the state, I hereby proclaim Friday, May 9, 1930, Arbor Day in this State of Maine, and ask that this day be fittingly observed throughout the State, not only in the schools, but wherever citizens shall gather in the interest of our common welfare."

BUCKFIELD—NORTH END

Mrs. Eugene Fuller entertained Mrs. Florence Child at her cottage in Sumner, a few days last week. While there, they called on Mrs. Allen Ryder.

Mrs. Raymond Tucker is at Gerald Briggs', where she is taking care of Mrs. Briggs, who has a baby son, born April 14th.

Mrs. Gertrude Hammond and Ida called at Harry Tucker's, Sunday night.

Miss Agnes Hurley of Portland, who teaches Buckfield Grammar School, spent the week end at Grover Keene's and while there called on old friends. Miss Hurley taught here two years ago.

C. L. Hammond is grafting for M. L. Rowe, Sr.

Snow most gone in this section. The heavy rain we got did lots of damage here but need more rain now.

Cliff Hammond planted his early peas, April 5th.

A young man from Auburn is at work for Linwood Morse.

Mrs. Florence Child has gone to Buckfield to work for Herbert Tuttle.

GROW GOOD PULLETS

"We're sold on this project by actual experience," W. Warren Chadbourne said in speaking of the Grow Good Pullets campaign now being sponsored in Maine by leading poultrymen and assisted by H. L. Richardson, poultry extension specialist, Orono. "Some of it is sad and all of it valuable," he continued. "Let's go over the first two points of the program together, while I tell you of some of the experiences which have ground into us a belief in the essential soundness of the methods advocated.

"First, 'Hatch Chicks Early.'

"For over 20 years we have been urging our baby chick customers to get their chicks early. Year by year we have seen an increasing trend toward the earlier hatches. This has been especially true since the value of Cod Liver Oil in feeding chicks has become known. In fact, the value of early hatching seems so well established in the minds of poultry keepers generally that it hardly needs to be greatly stressed. I would not minimize the point, however. It is one of the fundamental requirements for success.

"Second: 'Secure Chicks from Pullorum Disease Free Stock.' "Pullorum disease, you know, is what we formerly called Bacillary White Diarrhea. Two years ago as we were expanding our hatching business, we thought it would be a good thing to be on the Accredited List just for its advertising value. We had had low mortality in the chicks we had hatched and really had no idea that any reactors (Infected birds) would be found in our flock. So you can imagine the shock when word came from Orono that nine of our hens had reacted. We didn't believe it was right. We were from Missouri. We had to be shown. And we were!

"We devised what we thought a good way to check up on the laboratory test. We placed the nine reacting birds in a pen remote from our other hens, nested them with a cockerel we were willing to sacrifice and saved some of their eggs from which on January 4 we hatched 26 chicks. In the meantime the nine reactors and the cockerel had been marketed. These 26 chicks were apparently healthy, grew well, and were finally marketed when they reached broiler size, without one of them showing the slightest symptom of disease.

"Was it not natural to suppose if we got such results with the chicks of reactors we were safe in hatching and selling chicks from the non-reactors? We certainly thought so and so did others to whom we related our experience, but right here, we made one of our biggest blunders and let ourselves in for one of the most costly experiences which ever came our way.

"The first two hatches following this "test" went all right. With both the chicks which were kept at home and those which were sold, mortality was satisfactorily small. But the third hatch was a different matter. Some of those chicks were sold and some kept at home. Word soon began to come from some of the customers that they were losing chicks. Investigation showed that something serious indeed was the matter with that lot of chicks. Our own chicks started dying and we sent specimens to Orono for diagnosis. Mortality in our own flock and in some of those we had sold became very heavy, in some cases rising over 50 per cent before the epidemic ran its course, besides stunting many of the survivors. In the meantime, another hatch was coming off. What to do? Well, our customers, knowing the facts, were willing to take the chicks with the understanding that we were standing back of them.

"The first report from Orono was inconclusive. We had made the mistake of sending dead birds instead of sick ones. So we sent another lot and in a few days word came that they had isolated the Pullorum organism. That, of course, was conclusive. We decided it was time to take our licking and have it over with.

"We now turned to the Extension Service for a copy of the Accredited List. From this we selected from flocks from which we secured eggs to fill orders for baby chicks already taken and to start our own new flock. Then we cleared out and cleaned up one of our brooder houses and when the chicks hatched which we were to raise, we put all the old stock under strict quarantine. By this means we were able to keep the new flock clean so that the next fall we got them accredited.

"In the meantime we were making good as best we could the losses of our customers. All together we lost several hundred dollars by not accepting the verdict of the Agricultural College in the first place. So we say "Amen" to point 2, 'Secure Chicks from Pullorum Disease Free Stock.' "

THOUGHTS OF SPRING

By Mrs. Dana E. McAllister

What are we thinking of
In these days of storm and showers?
Green leaves, green grass,
And apple blossom flowers?
The blue jay's call?
The cawing of the crow?
The swelling of the buds?
The sharpening of the hoe?
The little chickens in the pen,
Running to and fro?
The silent growing of the rose?
Underneath the snow?
The sawing of the wood pile?
Tapping maple trees?
Planting of tomato seeds?
The buzzing of the bees?
O, the thoughts of spring will get you
Long before it's time, you know,
You'll be thinking of the daffodils
Underneath the snow.
Thinking of the warmer days
That are coming later on.
The weeding of the garden,
The hoeing of the corn.
Thinking of the berry patch,
Upon a sunny hill,
Of the luscious strawberries,
Just one, your mouth will fill.
Thinking of the earth's warm breast,
The sunshine, rain, and showers,
The little rills, the tinkling brook,
What dear, sweet thoughts are ours.
Thinking of the tasks to do,
The turning of the sod,
As Spring draws nearer day by day,
We'll be thinking more of God.

A FIRST SPRING VISIT

Toward Taurus' starry zone, the sun
His glad ascent is making,
Smiling on each and every one,
And nature re-awaking.
Right in my room he came and peeked
Early this April morning,
With patch of radiance golden streaked
The wall and window awning.
Delight and gladness thrilled me through
On Phoebus' first Spring visit,
My breast was filled with hope anew
And stirred with joy exquisite.
And all day long I've felt the charm
Of day-king's brightness cheering,
For now each morn, with radiance warm,
He'll in my room come peering.

—FATHER CASSIDY, Ottawa, Canada.
April 8, 1930.

A FOREIGN RAIN

When skies are gray as they are today
And I know not where to turn,
Then I realize with sad, misty eyes
That for home I long and yearn.
The starless sky, the towers on high
Hold no appeal for me;
Oh! for trees and grass! I'm a country lass;
That's where I ought to be.
Then when skies are gray, they ne'er dismay
For I love the rain at home,
Were I out today, I'd just run away
From the world—and be alone.

Tamarack Talk

Music makes an incursion in our column this week. Music after all, is many times, if not always, the outgrowth of poetry—of beautiful and spiritual thought. Music is and should be the final expression of the words. Music brings out the meaning of the words by various moods and tempos which in vigorous or quiet rhythms may suggest tragedy, or calm and peace. But always, as in the case of the greater compositions, there are words to be enhanced by the skillful arrangement of voice or instrument or both.

In a city where industrial activities are predominatingly prominent and where it would seem there exists a lack of love for cultivation and enrichment of the nobler things of life, opportunity was recently afforded the citizens to accept or reject an evening's respite from the realm of modern jazz and entertainment. That about one thousand persons chose to listen to the presentation of two oratorios in preference to a night at the club or the theatres proves that a love for and a consciousness of beauty still exists, in spite of what some would like to have us think.

An oratorio is a sacred work usually based upon some Biblical legend, tale or miracle, and presents a type of musical that should be even harder for some moderns to undergo. But the love and the patience of 250, who comprised the vocal chorus on this occasion is proof indeed that we are still seeking to find the beautiful, and are actually becoming conscious of Truth through music and poetry.

Poetry and music go hand in hand. For some poetry is "words that sing," for others music is poetry. But all true poetry must have a certain rhythm to it, a swing that marks it apart from ordinary words. Poetry may be the tones of actual speech, yet a jumble of trite words in rhyme conveys to the thinking reader or listener no sense of beauty or truth. Samuel Taylor Coleridge said that prose consists of "words in their best order," while poetry is "the best words in the best order."

Yet unless the public is some way stirred by sound of poetry and gradually comes to listen intelligently to poems, it will be bound down as it has been for years, unable to catch the worth of a poem except by the written word. The radio, however, may turn out to be the means of getting people more poetry conscious, guiding them away from the idea that poetry is lifeless, a thing of the past to be relegated into obscurity with older bygone institutions.

That poetry has been read more often than spoken makes the limitations in accepting and learning more about it, for, the many can ordinarily comprehend the spoken word with ease compared to the problem of digesting quickly from a mere single reading of a poem. So it has come that only those especially interested in the movement in modern poetry have grown up both reading and hearing it, while the great majority need to hear the expression of the words to really understand, from the inflection, what the words actually are meant to convey.

ESSAY CONTEST

Open to School Children of Maine

Announcement has recently been made of an essay contest, with prizes aggregating $200.00, open to all the school children of Maine, on the subject, "Why Maine is the State of My Opportunity". This contest is being sponsored by B. Peck Company, Lewiston, in connection with the celebration of its Golden Jubilee.

Two classes of prizes are offered, class A for pupils of high schools and academies, and class B for elementary school children. The prizes in class A are, 1st, $25.00, 2nd, $20.00, 3rd, $15.00 and ten prizes of $5.00 each for the ten next best. Prizes in class B are, 1st, $20.00, 2nd $15.00, 3rd $10.00, with ten prizes of $5.00 each for the ten next best.

The judges will be Hon. William Tudor Gardiner, Governor of Maine; Mrs. Edna Hutchins, President of the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs; Hon. Arthur G. Staples, Editor of The Lewiston Evening Journal; Hon. Bertrand E. Packard, Commissioner of Education and Prof. E. M. Wright, head of the English Department at Bates College.

Contest rules are being mailed to superintendents, teachers, and also may be secured on application to the Contest Editor, B. Peck Company, Lewiston, Maine. The closing date will be May 15th.

The contest was inspired by the experience of the founder of the Peck perience of the founder of the Peck Company, Bradford Peck, who came to Lewiston 50 years ago, at the age of 27, giving up employment in another State, where he was getting a salary of $5,000 a year, to open a store in Lewiston. How well his faith in Maine was justified, the Pecks of today testify.

ARBOR DAY, MAY NINTH

Governor Gardiner has proclaimed May 9th as Arbor Day. The proclamation is as follows:

"Among our natural resources, tree have had and will always have a place of first importance. Maine is the Pine Tree State and upon its seal a pine tree symbolizes the unfailing source of the prosperity and happiness of our people.

"In the very beginning of this State, when the men of Maine went down to the sea in ships, our greatest trees furnished both carriers and cargoes. Today, with 78 percent of our area in forested lands, the further development of our commerce and industry depends upon the conservation of these gifts of nature.

"It is our duty and high privilege as citizens to leave nothing undone to secure to those who come after us the same material benefits and the same beauty and refreshment in our trees and forests that we now enjoy.

"To this end, therefore, and in accordance with a wise law of the state, I hereby proclaim Friday, May 9, 1930, Arbor Day in this State of Maine, and ask that this day be fittingly observed throughout the State, not only in the schools, but wherever citizens shall gather in the interest of our common welfare."

GROW GOOD PULLETS

"We're sold on this project by actual experience," W. Warren Chadbourne said in speaking of the Grow Good Pullets campaign now being sponsored in Maine by leading poultrymen and assisted by H. L. Richardson, poultry extension specialist, Orono. "Some of it is sad and all of it valuable," he continued. "Let's go over the first two points of the program together, while I tell you of some of the experiences which have ground into us a belief in the essential soundness of the methods advocated.

"First, 'Hatch Chicks Early.'

"For over 20 years we have been urging our baby chick customers to get their chicks early. Year by year we have seen an increasing trend toward the earlier hatches. This has been especially true since the value of Cod Liver Oil in feeding chicks has become known. In fact, the value of early hatching seems so well established in the minds of poultry keepers generally that it hardly needs to be greatly stressed. I would not minimize the point, however. It is one of the fundamental requirements for success.

"Second: 'Secure Chicks from Pullorum Disease Free Stock.' "Pullorum disease, you know, is what we formerly called Bacillary White Diarrhea. Two years ago as we were expanding our hatching business, we thought it would be a good thing to be on the Accredited List just for its advertising value. We had had low mortality in the chicks we had hatched and really had no idea that any reactors (Infected birds) would be found in our flock. So you can imagine the shock when word came from Orono that nine of our hens had reacted. We didn't believe it was right. We were from Missouri. We had to be shown. And we were!

"We devised what we thought a good way to check up on the laboratory test. We placed the nine reacting birds in a pen remote from our other hens, nested them with a cockerel we were willing to sacrifice and saved some of their eggs from which on January 4 we hatched 26 chicks. In the meantime the nine reactors and the cockerel had been marketed. These 26 chicks were apparently healthy, grew well, and were finally marketed when they reached broiler size, without one of them showing the slightest symptom of disease.

"Was it not natural to suppose if we got such results with the chicks of reactors we were safe in hatching and selling chicks from the non-reactors? We certainly thought so and so did others to whom we related our experience, but right here, we made one of our biggest blunders and let ourselves in for one of the most costly experiences which ever came our way.

"The first two hatches following this "test" went all right. With both the chicks which were kept at home and those which were sold, mortality was satisfactorily small. But the third hatch was a different matter. Some of those chicks were sold and some kept at home. Word soon began to come from some of the customers that they were losing chicks. Investigation showed that something serious indeed was the matter with that lot of chicks. Our own chicks started dying and we sent specimens to Orono for diagnosis. Mortality in our own flock and in some of those we had sold became very heavy, in some cases rising over 50 per cent before the epidemic ran its course, besides stunting many of the survivors. In the meantime, another hatch was coming off. What to do? Well, our customers, knowing the facts, were willing to take the chicks with the understanding that we were standing back of them.

"The first report from Orono was inconclusive. We had made the mistake of sending dead birds instead of sick ones. So we sent another lot and in a few days word came that they had isolated the Pullorum organism. That, of course, was conclusive. We decided it was time to take our licking and have it over with.

"We now turned to the Extension Service for a copy of the Accredited List. From this we selected from flocks from which we secured eggs to fill orders for baby chicks already taken and to start our own new flock. Then we cleared out and cleaned up one of our brooder houses and when the chicks hatched which we were to raise, we put all the old stock under strict quarantine. By this means we were able to keep the new flock clean so that the next fall we got them accredited.

"In the meantime we were making good as best we could the losses of our customers. All together we lost several hundred dollars by not accepting the verdict of the Agricultural College in the first place. So we say "Amen" to point 2, 'Secure Chicks from Pullorum Disease Free Stock.' "

THE ROAD CALLED LIFE

Bright and new is the way before them,
 They are partners—husband and wife,
But as they start on the road before them,
 The road which we all call "Life."

Hand in hand they skip o'er the highway,
 Never minding the thorns by the road,
Happy they journey along each day,
 What matters how heavy the load?

No hill is too high, no grade too steep,
 No matter how stormy the weather,
They hurry on with eager feet,
 This lassie and lad together.

Years—Comes a bend in the road,
 One of them stops to rest,
But the other one gathers up the load
 Perhaps—it is for the best.

But the partner turns, and with a sigh,
 He quickly brushes a tear,
Looking back, sees memories gone by,
 Memories, they held so dear.

An old man trudging down the road
 Says, "Not backward, but on, my son,
Come, pick up your heavy load,
 Hurry on, ere the set of the sun.

"The goal, my son, is a place called Home,
 You will see trails of slander, too,
Always they are there where e'er we roam,
 And much is expected of you.

"Soon, you will come to a fork in the road,
 A sign called Conscience leads right,
Just face the goal with your heavy load
 It isn't so far from sight.

"And when you get to the end of the road,
 You will find your partner, son.
You will reach the goal, lay down the load,
 And then you will hear 'Well Done.' "

CONTEST WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Miss Abbie M. Buck, Director of School Health Service for the Maine Public Health Association announces the prize winners in the Health Play Writing Contest for High Schools which closed Mar. 31. The first prize of $25.00, which was unanimously awarded to "Article Number Ten," Stearns High School, Millinocket, was written by the students in the English class. The second prize of $15. was awarded to the play entitled "You Win." The author of this play is Ruth Clary, of the Williams High School, Oakland. The third prize of $10.00 will be awarded to the play entitled "A One Act Play" which was written by J. Irene Hamilton, Brooklin High School, Brooklin, Maine: Honorable mention and a gift of $5.00 was also awarded to the play "It Often Happens." This play was written by Rita May Shaw, of the South Paris High School, South Paris, and was presented by members of the Home Economics class.

The judges for the state contest were the same as last year. Harrison C. Lyseth, Agent for Secondary Education, State Department of Education, Mrs. A. O. Thomas, Cony High School, and Mrs. Alice McGouldrick, Field Secretary of the Maine Public Health Association, all of Augusta.

The three prize winning plays have been submitted to the New England judges, for entrance in the Playwriting Contest conducted by the Public Health Associations in the six New England States. The judges for this contest are: Mr. E. E. Clive, Managing Director of the Copley Theatre, Boston, Mass., Mrs. William Harris, Jr., Hartford, Conn., Rev. Walter F. Greenman, All Souls' Church, Augusta, Maine. $100.00 will be awarded to the play winning first prize, $50.00 to the play winning second prize and $25.00 to the play winning third prize.

The three plays winning in the New England Contest will be presented at the Copley Theatre, Boston, Mass., in May. If one of the three prize plays submitted in the Maine Contest is fortunate enough to win in the New England contest, the pupils who will produce this play will be taken to Boston for the event, and the Maine Public Health Association will assume all expenses.

The following contains a resume of the plays:

Article Number Ten

The scene of this play is laid around a town meeting held in a prosperous and enterprising town which has just experienced a serious epidemic of scarlet fever. This town has for only one year, employed a school nurse. This nursing service has not been fully appreciated as objections to raising an appropriation for the continuance of the service show. Dr. Keepwell comes to the rescue and explains the benefits derived from the service; parents also testify. Mr. Nuisance states that his deafness followed scarlet fever. Through the efforts of these people an appropriation for the school nursing is made.

You Win

The curtain rises on Dr. Martin's office. The Doctor and his wife having been appointed judges are to decide which of the five girls who have been sent in from Williams High School, is the healthiest. All the girls in the high school not measuring up to certain standards have been eliminated from this contest. Dr. Tracy, a young physician, calls to witness the health inspection. He tells Dr. and Mrs. Martin of the high school girl who consults him and on his advice has been making rapid gains. The treatment consists of correct diet, more sleep, exercise in the open air, etc. The first four girls examined show respective defects in weight, teeth, posture, etc. The fifth girl, Grace Ellis, the patient of whom Dr. Tracy speaks, passes the examination and is awarded the $5.00 prize.

A One Act Play

The County Nurse visits the rural school in a small community for the purpose of making an annual health inspection of the pupils. An underprivileged child, with the help of the nurse, is given a bath and a new suit of clothes. Later this pupil becomes the charge of the teacher and corrects his slovenly habits. This play is accompanied by two little songs, the words and music of which are written by Miss Hamilton.

NEW IDEAS IN TURKEY RAISING

Women were blamed for a lot of confusion in the turkey industry in a talk given at Farm and Home Week, University of Maine, by M. C. Grindell, Bluehill. "There are too many secret methods for raising turkeys", he continued, "I hope the ladies present will forgive me for saying that they are the cause of a lot of the confusion that exists today. Farm women have always raised a few turkeys for pin money and of course they should continue to do so. But the trouble is that they all have a secret. Since I have the greatest desire not to be on the outs with the ladies I hasten to add that a lot of men are afflicted that way, too. But did you ever notice that the man or woman who corners you and talks you deaf, dumb, and blind about the merits of their particular secret is always a small producer and has ordinary or poor luck, due to circumstances beyond their control? Folks, there are no secrets; the business is getting too big and widespread for that. I never used a drug, remedy or secret formula in my life and I have never made a discovery that I did not immediately pass on to the public. I know that other large producers and investigators at our experiment stations have done the same. You are now seeing large turkey farms springing up all over the country and with this will come an era of over-production, but when the smoke of the present confusion has cleared away it will be found that the rules of production are standardized.

"The bonanza days of turkey production are over. Wet weather in May and June is a very determining factor and the two seasons previous to last year were the worst I have ever seen. In spite of that, turkey prices barely held their own, also bearing in mind that we were in an era of the greatest industrial prosperity we had ever known. Then came last year—the driest season for years. You all know what happened to prices.

"In former years it was simply a question of being able to raise the birds to maturity regardless of cost. Now that that problem has been conquered, thanks to the investigators, another is being forced upon us by competition. At the rate that New England is taking up turkey production, in a short while we will have to compete not only with the West, but with one another, and it is the man with the lowest production costs that will win out."

Mr. Grindell explained his method of raising turkeys in detail giving special emphasis to hatching, brooding, feeding, disease control and marketing. He recommended sanitation as one of the best preventions for blockhead.

Left over egg yolks have many uses. They are a valuable source of iron and so should always be utilized. They may be hard-cooked in the double boiler, mashed, and seasoned for sandwich filling. Raw or hard-cooked egg yolks make a good foundation for salad dressing. Several good egg sauces for fish or meat can be made with the yolks only, and soft custard for desert is still another use. Pastry trimmings, cut like cookies, brushed with egg yolk, sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon or sugar and grated orange rind, and baked, make delicious tea cakes.

DEMAND OF SUMMER RESIDENTS FOR FRESH VEGETABLES

A survey was made last year by a student in Horticulture. This survey covered a considerable number of Maine's summer camps, both large and small. All of them used large quantities of fresh vegetables. Those vegetables most widely used included: beets, peas, sweet corn, string beans, tomatoes, cucumbers, and others were used in smaller amounts.

Of these, sweet corn was secured almost exclusively from within the state, but of the others from 30 to 50 per cent. were usually obtained from outside sources. The management of most of these camps expressed a preference for local produce and stated that they used such produce whenever possible. The chief cause for not obtaining such vegetables locally seemed to be that they were not available early enough. Most of the camps are open during July and August.

The demand furnishes a good opportunity for market gardeners in the vicinity of the camps, and rather than see it met by outside growers, it seems that the Maine gardener should use every means possible of increasing the earliness of his product so that he will be able to supply this demand.

FIRE LOSSES

Forty-three Thousand a Day

It is said that any nation is as strong as the homes within its boundaries. Fire then strikes at the very heart of America when it causes a loss of over $43,000 a day in homes through carelessness with matches and "smokes". The National Board of Fire Underwriters points out that the total for 1928 in city, suburban and farm dwellings was in excess of $15,825,000.

Those who have made a study of conditions find an important difference between safety and fire danger in the use of these common articles. Matches are thrown away carelessly without being completely extinguished. They are lighted where conditions are dangerous—where explosive fumes may be present, or near a pile of papers or rubbish. They are often kept within the reach of young children or in cardboard boxes instead of in metal or earthenware containers.

The hazard from "smokes" develops when they are thrown away without being carefully extinguished, when they are thrown in piles of paper or rubbish, or when they are smoked where conditions are dangerous.

Even when all classes of property are considered, the careless use of matches and smoking materials is the largest single cause of fire in America. In 1928 it was responsible for a loss of over $34,878,000. This is reason enough for cautioning Americans to be careful without mentioning the fact that our total annual fire loss from all causes amounts to about $500,000,000 annually.

Too many of us are fond of believing that the good old days were the only days in which to live. Actually, conditions are just the same and the difficulties and problems that face us today, in proportionate measure are similar to those that faced our hardy forbears. "We must stop looking back and keep the eyes front." He charged the service organizations of the Country with the responsibility of cementing community friendships and setting the example of good citizenship.

CONTENTMENT

The flames leap up the chimney,
The wind roars around the house,
And there from the dusty attic
Comes the squeaks of a tiny mouse.

The rain beats over all the earth,
Little birds must breast the storm,
But here in the old red arm chair
It is restful, safe, and warm.

And I thank the fate that made me
Not a flame, or a bird, or a mouse,
But a man, who may sit contented
By his fireside, in the house.

The School Flag

By R. L. Herrick

One fall the teacher and scholars in the district where I lived decided that they must have a flag for the schoolhouse and it was agreed that the teachers and older scholars should furnish the needed money for this purpose. It was found that a good flag would cost seven dollars. The teacher agreed to furnish one dollar of the amount and six of the oldest boys agreed to furnish the remainder at one dollar a piece.

Now money was not plentiful at that time among the families of farmers and it was a question of much concern to the boys as to how they were to get the required sum.

This story will deal with only two of the number which we will call John and Lewis. There was a small village not far distant with one hotel, where during the summer and fall there were many guests who came from cities to spend a little time in the country and fish and hunt. Here was always a good market for game, for although most of the guests went hunting more or less, there was not very much game brought in by them. Some of the older boys of the neighborhood used to earn a little money during spare time shooting partridge and rabbits, to sell at the inn.

Now John and Lewis, although fast friends, were of very different natures, no great amount of argument ever arose between them, as each let the other go in his own way and said little. After having discussed ways and means, the two boys decided to try their luck hunting partridges to earn their share of the flag fund. Accordingly the next Saturday afternoon (for in those days school kept five and one-half days in the week) they set out for a large wood lot owned by a farmer, Mr. Bearce. On their way they crossed the fields of Mr. Bearce, and along the edge of a large piece of corn in the field next to the cow pasture.

Between the corn field and pasture there was a stone wall laid of smallish stones. To reach the wood lot they must climb over this wall and in doing so they loosened some of the stones and a long piece of the wall of about half of its height rolled down, leaving a gap over which the cows could easily jump and get into the corn.

"Now," said Lewis, "we must lay up this wall before we go on or Mr. Bearce's cows will get into his corn." "O, I won't bother with the old wall, I shan't stop to lay it, no matter if Old Bearce's cows do get into his corn, I don't care," said John. "Well, then I will lay it up alone," said Lewis, and standing his gun by a tree he fell to work, while John went on across the pasture to the wood lot.

After much hard lifting the wall was all relaid and Lewis took his gun and started to climb over to go on to the woods, when he heard a voice call his name, and on looking around he saw Mr. Bearce coming through the corn toward him. Mr. Bearce had been in the corn all the time and saw and heard all that had happened or been said. He also had heard of the school flag and the effort that was being made by the boys to raise money for its purchase.

On coming up he said, "How would you like a job husking corn for me during spare time, as I have twelve acres more to husk, it will give you a chance to earn quite a lot as I will pay five cents a bushel for husking and emptying into the cart, which will be kept as near the work as possible." It is needless to say that this proposition pleased Lewis very much and he readily agreed to work all the time possible. "I will go," he said, "and find John and tell him I'm not going hunting, then I will return and begin at once."

He went over in the wood lot and soon found John, who had not gone far nor found any game. John did not seem much pleased at the good fortune of Lewis, but said he hoped he would get his pay for the work, but for his part he had rather do something else that husk corn. "Well, I like to husk corn," said Lewis, "and besides, I know of nothing else to do that is at all sure of producing any money, so I am going back and begin at once." Thus he left John to pursue all the game he might see and returned to the corn field. Here he found Mr. Bearce at work and a spare basket for himself. Mr. Bearce gave him an account book and pencil, telling him to keep an account of all the corn he emptied into the cart. "But," said Lewis, "that will be giving me a chance to cheat. I should work near you and you keep the account of my corn. Mr. Bearce said he had no fear to trust him, so he began work at once and worked with a will.

After meandering around for some time John returned home empty handed, going by another route, not wishing to meet either Mr. Bearce or Lewis. Every morning and afternoon Lewis worked and there were two more Saturday afternoons before the corn was all husked. As the days were short he didn't have very long to work on school days, but when the corn was all gathered, his account, which he had kept carefully and honestly, showed that he had husked one hundred and eighty bushels, for which he received nine dollars.

During all this time John had tried various ways of earning his share of the flag money, but had failed in them all, and when the day arrived for the scholars to pay in their money it was found that all of them had secured their quota except John. This made him feel badly, and all the more so from the fact that he well knew that if he had helped relay the wall he too would have had a chance to husk corn and have money for his share.

Lewis, knowing of John's plight offered to lend him the dollar until such time that he might be able to earn the amount. This was not very agreeable to John, but was the only way which he could see out of his difficulty, so he accepted the offer and not long after a man in the neighborhood offered to hire him to fit up some four foot wood, which he had in his yard. It must be sawed twice and split fine enough to use in a cook stove. It was hard, dry wood, slow to saw and much of it tough to split—a man's job, but he agreed to work it up during his spare time and was to have one dollar and fifty cents per cord for it. Despite blistered hands and lame arms he kept at the task until he had fitted four cords, for which he received six dollars and was now able to repay Lewis.

One night soon after, on their way home from school, (as they lived on adjoining farms and always walked to and from school together) John said to Lewis, "I think I have learned a lesson to have more regard for other people's rights. If I had helped relay that wall I would have had a chance to husk corn with you and not have had to borrow money to pay my share on the flag." And I may say that the lesson which he had learned was ever after reflected in his conduct.

MAINE STATE SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF ANIMALS

The president of the Maine State Society for the Protection of Animals is sending out the following letter:

The old mistaken belief that birds and animals have no feelings which should be respected by man, still lingers in the minds of many people, and is the cause of much heartless neglect and cruelty, both in the United States and in foreign countries.

Our national "Be Kind to Animals" week, beginning on April 21st and concluding with "Humane Sunday," April 27th, offers a fitting occasion to help in uprooting this false and misery-producing theory.

We hope that on "Humane Sunday" your pulpits and your Sunday Schools will give impetus to this national appeal for the extension of mercy, both in this and other lands, to the humble creatures of God, who cannot plead for themselves. "Blessed are the merciful" are the recorded words of the campassionate Jesus.

In proportion as the all-enfolding love, expressed in these words, is understood and acted upon, brutal sports and customs together with legalized cruel practices will cease, and the whole world will be the happier for it.

THE GUEST TOWEL

It has been said that "actresses may happen in the best of families." Another enigma is: "Why the guest towel?" Every family may not have an actress, but nearly every family has a set of guest towels. Why? Nobody uses them, not even the guests. We all know the line-up of towels on the rack near the bath tub. There are the ones for the family, and those for the guests. No matter whether there are any guests or not, there must be guest towels. The family does not dare use them, and the guests, usually trained in the same manner in their own homes, also refrain for no other reason than "What is good enough for the host is good enough for me."

KILL THE CHAIN LETTER

Chain letters are again rampant. So long as this world produces a single unit in a generation, a chain letter will be written. So long as it produces a million nuts, the chain letter will prosper.

Quite recently a statistician figured that if the claims made in a chain letter received by him were correct, 2,816,052,982,534,581,690,712,218,734,346,580 copies of the letter had been mailed. Figure the millions, billions and trillions of dollars in postage this would mean, and learn once and for all that the chain letter is a delusion and a snare.

Anyone superstitious enough to believe that the writing or destroying of a chain letter of any kind, has any bearing upon his future, is surely entitled to a celluloid medal bearing the words, "The World's Prize Boob".

The privilege of touching a match to this medal should be given to the man, who during the past year had proven himself the most philanthropic human.

Dixfield Forty Years Ago

By Emerson P. Bartlett

Memory goes back to that good old village, and often have I wondered that if I should write a few lines of my boyhood, happy days there, if they would catch the eye of some of the old bunch that lived there in the days when the Harlow Block was built, and Barnard Marble kept the National House on the opposite corner, well do I remember that tall beaver hat he used to wear.

Do you remember seeing Uncle Tyler Kidder driving through the streets as his strong voice would ring out, "Gidup old Lyon". Many a time I have seen Uncle Tyler returning from a three weeks trip among the back-woods trappers with a thousand dollars worth of furs in the old pung.

I recall the old Foster toothpick mill at the mouth of Webb River, those who knew the mill certainly knew Charles Freeman and Lydia Packard. I worked for Mr. Freeman three whole winters, operating a toothpick machine and many a silver dollar he handed me, also working there for many years were Lewis Humphrey, Uncle Tom Huston and his son, Thaxter, Maurice Wilson, Elton Newton, better known in those days as "Broncho", and the Ricker boys, George and Charles, and many more that memory cannot recall.

Almost touching the southeast corner of the toothpick mill was the old wooden bridge, where the iron bridge now crosses Webb River; a short distance above the bridge was the lower dam, while about one hundred feet up river was the upper dam. Millions of feet of heavy long lumber would find its way over those dams annually, aided by husky river drivers, among whom I did my little part in those days, acting as cook, later becoming a regular river driver and followed that occupation for many seasons, and many a time I have been in, and the door would shut after me. Though I could never swim a stroke I have lived through it all so far.

Right opposite the lower dam was Mr. Kirby's 5 and 10 cent store, only a few feet from the sidewalk, and after a few years Percy Gammon's father used the building, well equipped with machinery, where for many years he manufactured hand rakes.

Almost adjoining this building was William Putnam's mill, known as a sash and blind mill, also anything that could be made out of wood could either be found in stock there, or orders for same taken, such as caskets, boats and the like. Oscar Howard worked for Mr. Putnam for a long term of years, and a better wood worker was mighty hard to find; this was Walter E. Howard's father.

Nestled close by was the old grist mill, and Philip Andrews was the miller, nearly all of the farmers in that vicinity raised wheat and had it ground at this mill as well as other grain. The flour was rather dark colored, though very palatable biscuits it would make and many a barrel I helped to stow away in supplying the wants of the inner man. At Philip's mill they also carded wool, and about every farmer had a flock of sheep and the mittens and stockings that were made from the wool that was carded at this mill would be a hard thing to duplicate today, though probably more adapted to the need of the farmer and lumber jack, than the modern flapper.

A few steps up river was Lamont Willoughby's saw mill and it was a busy place all winter, and late into the spring, for he did an awful lot of sawing for the farmers from all around. Ninety per cent. of the logs were hauled in by ox teams, which were the farmers' hobby back in those days. What powerful strings Donald and Granville Torrey used to come in with, often with seven and eight yoke in the team ranging from yearling steers up to eight feet oxen, while some of their loads would be as large as a medium sized load of loose hay, and kind reader let me tell you those teams would have attracted attention at the Brockton Fair.

Nate Cox and his black dog, Twist! Nate conducted a shoe cobbler's shop on Main street and ran a small store in connection, he butchered and drove the butcher's cart, and brought up a large family, some of whose members, I have been told, are wealthy at this time.

No doubt there are many who remember the night Gerry Harlow's awning was stripped from its moorings. Yes, I do, for one.

Those that remember when William Wait used to own the trotting park on the plains and hold racing meetings there upon the Fourth of July, and at short intervals throughout the summer and fall, just take five and sit down and work your memory back to when we were boys and girls and were so deeply interested in seeing those close fought heats and hear the clatter and bang of the high wheeled sulkies while they would often get squeezed pretty hard coming down the home stretch. Now let us see—there would be perched on those wooden wheeled vehicles, Joseph Edmonds, Willis and Leonard Brackett, Emerson Ames, Herschel Holt, better known then as "Scrappy" and Fred and Wilder Chase and many more old timers. All the above mentioned reinsmen were locals, but all the horsemen from all around with their horses were regular visitors at these meetings, where hard battles were fought.

Some of the horses owned in the village or near by and were raced successfully, were Katie B, and Bert trained and raced by Joseph Edmonds. The mare was owned by Wallace Hutchinson and while under the management of Mr. Edmonds, she was sold to a Brockton, Mass., party for one thousand dollars, which was a long price for those days. Joe owned Bert and he was one of the handsomest horses ever raced upon the old track, and that is saying a good deal. Scrappy drove many good ones to the front, among them was Charles Bonner. I was taking care of this horse at a meeting on the Canton race track, when he came under the wire a winner, though he only went about fifteen feet when he dropped to the ground dead and Scrappy was thrown a great distance, fortunately escaping with only minor bruises.

That noted reinsman, Emerson Ames, drove a number of good ones to a low mark, Nancy B, Spoolmaker, and a dozen more came down the home stretch to the credit of Emerson.

Wilder Chase owned that swift pacer, Charles Hadley; Fred Chase owned that handsome stallion, Lord Nelson, and other good ones; Willis Brackett, a valuable stallion, whose name I think, was Venture Boone. Wid, as everyone called him had the misfortune of losing this horse very suddenly. He always had brood mares and colts on hand and Wid was considered as one of the best horse breeders to be found and also a real wizard on pedigrees. Leonard Brackett owned some good brood mares from which he raised Blizzard and Cyclone, and a number more good ones.

William Smith, who was one of Dixfield's leading sports, and a traveling salesman, owned and raced Lady Martin, Jerry and the Lambert Mare, with Scrappy in the sulky. Bill always had a number of good colts growing up, too.

Oh what a swift pacer Hiram Randall bought from John Leavitt. Frank Stanley always had a lot of speed to show, including fancy and fast pairs.

Did you ever hear it doubted but what Dixfield was a lively horse town back in those days? Every winter the main street was kept as smooth as a billiard table and an attractive speedway it was.

We had what was called a short ship circuit, including our local track, Canton, Livermore, South Paris, and Andover. My services were in great demand and I attended all of the meetings, acting as groom for the drivers, in other words a swipe. Now while it is fresh on my memory I want to tell you of an instance that used to happen frequently while at the different tracks along the circuit which was very troublesome to the horsemen. Trusting you will not mention this part, though I dare say there are horsemen of today who well remember back thirty-five and perhaps forty years. When most of the boys used to take with them upon these trips, a little tonic that I think they called split and when their horses would win a heat they would partake of a small sample of the liquid and it strikes me at this writing that at times when their horse did not win they would also take a sip. Now kind reader please consider that this all happened a long time back and of course it is safe to say that such a thing is not even thought of at this time and nothing stronger than Mount Zircon Water is ever taken along by the horsemen.

Here was our trouble and the way it was overcome; it was impossible to conceal our goods so that some interested party could not find it and reduce the contents of the container while we were out for heats. Once, while at our regular meeting at South Paris a friend came to our stable who was a physician, and we told him of our trouble. He took an ounce bottle from his case and put two drops of the liquid into what was called in those days a long necker of split, automatically it changed the color to that of Paris green. Doc told us to throw it right down upon the straw right in plain view and leave it there while out for the next heat. Now let me ask you fair minded people would you have taken the chance? We were always told to follow the physician's advice and this time we did and it proved an overwhelming success and many a hearty laugh we had over it.

Walter Howard is master mechanic at the largest paper mill in the world, The Oxford Mill at Rumford, Maine. Ask Walter if he remembers when sixteen of us boys went to Canton upon Mart Kilgore's four horse team, and there connected with the train for Lewiston to attend the Barnum & Bailey circus.

Every autumn there were large droves of cattle driven through the village upon the way to market. I have seen many a drove upwards of four hundred in them. Some of those droves were forced to swim the Androscoggin River at the Charles Hammond ferry, as late in the season as November 1st. There were also many droves of sheep came through the village and I have seen as many as thirteen hundred in some of them. They, of course, had to be carried across in the ferry boat, sometimes at the Hammond ferry and other droves at the Brown ferry, one mile below the village, ferrying those large droves was a slow process.

Some of the old timers were Dr. B. W. Tingley, Dr. Philoon, Dr. Zenas Bartlett, Thomas Cox, Elbridge Harlow, Jefferson and Thadeous White, Cyrus Newton, James Parker, Scott Chase, Barnard Marble, Luther Ludden and that veteran stage driver, John Pickens, and there were Mrs. Phelps, and Aunt Ellen Gould that lived upon the plains.

Some of the boys around my age were as follows: Eustace Greenleaf, Charles Pickens, Carroll Leavitt, George Smith, Claude Griffith, Wade Trask, Walter Eastman, Norman Marsh, Percy Gammon, Charles Ricker, Frank Willoughby, Johnnie Holland, Frank Fish, Wid Ricker, Grant Harlow, Walter E. Howard and Elton Newton, better known in those days as Broncho. Elton drove team for C. C. Freeman of the toothpick mill. For years Broncho's hobby was horse back riding and the most of his spare time was spent that way.

Those who were present at ice skating parties when we would skate five miles up to Webb River Falls, more than forty years ago upon moonlight nights, and return at about midnight, please raise your hand.

In the rear of Steven Griffith's horness shop and quite close to the Androscoggin River was an old, one story building, used to store carriages and sleighs. The windows were all boarded up tight. Most every autumn quite a few of us boys used to enter through a very small door in the basement and then crawl up through a hole in the floor, where a small chimney had been taken out. We had an outfit that consisted of a very large dry goods box for a table, two kerosene lanterns, and several nail kegs for chairs. Often we would gather there and engage in a little poker game, of the penny ante—five cent limit caliber, that often would last into the young hours of the day following.

While we were holding one of those notorious gambling meetings one rough November night, after having saved up a little extra cash for this particular gathering, there were eight of us around the old box, there was a heap of Uncle Sam's goods upon the table. I will say there must have been between eighty-five cents and a dollar, including little silver five cent pieces, two cent pieces and bung town coppers with the nickle the largest face value.

It was at about midnight, and everything was rolling right along smooth and some of us were getting pretty wealthy, when all of a sudden our attention was attracted by the rattling of the padlock chain at the main entrance, which was only about eight feet from out table. Talk about your radio spreading stuff across the country, you should have seen this little midnight party breaking up. With a rat hole in the floor our only exit, with a perpendicular drop if seven feet to the ground below, eight of us, thank —— there were no more of us, for we only had a fractional part of a minute to turn the trick. However, we scored a clean get away, though some of our bodies carried scars that were quite visable for more than four weeks. Never again did we enter that old joint that had sheltered us upon many meetings.

Several of us boys walked to Rumford many times in the morning, and returned at night during the summer that the large jam of logs were piled high and occupied the whole of Rumford Falls. There were said to be two million feet of lumber in that jam, more than a carload of dynamite was used, and it took more than five months to clear the river. I have often heard it said, that it caused a number of lumbermen that formerly were in very good circumstances, to go broke. As to memory this jam was forty-seven years ago.

along, I am wondering if at the same time any one will read these lines that used to go to dancing school in the Harlow hall in my class. No doubt Mrs. Selden Barrett will, as Minnie was my partner at one term with Wilder Chase for a teacher. Wilder, at that time, had fully grown to manhood though a feather weight, and his superior in the dance hall stuff, did not inhabit the State of Maine in those days.

The Good Templars Lodge held weekly meetings in their room upon the first floor in the Harlow block, with Mrs. Hattie Kilgore, a leading member, with Col. William T. Eustace, William Abbott and William Putnam, very popular speakers.

Mellie and I used to shake a clever foot in those days at the Harlow hall, at the Dixfield Grange Hall, at the hall near Smith's crossing, then called (Hardscrabble), the old hall at Mexico Corner, where Wilder Chase's orchestra, including himself, Nelson Rowes, Fred Chase, Herschel Holt, and George Brown furnished music. Now let me be sure that you get me right as to the Mellie that I have mentioned above, for perhaps the Mellie that you may have in mind may be Mellie Dunham, who caused more popularity in recent years than any party that ever fiddled for fun or money. Now the Mellie that I am speaking of here is Mellie Frost that has worked in the Oxford Paper Mill for eighteen years, and some of the old dances we used to warm up on were Portland Fancy, Lady of the Lake, Devils Dream, Hulls Victory, Fishers Hornpipe and Money Musk.

Pardon me, please, for taking you back to the beginning of this story. In speaking of the Harlow Block, I think it was built in the year of eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and the brick that it was built from was made by Leonard and Willis Brackett, in their own brick kiln, on the banks of Webb River, just above the Thaddeus White bridge, said Brackett Bros., I think, did all of the brick work. The old block is standing today as strong as a mountain.

Many a day I hunted foxes with Newton Stowell, Joseph Edmonds, Almond Stockbridge and Henry O. Stanley. I carried an old muzzle loading shot gun. Yes, those antiques were killers all right, but did you ever try to see how quick you could load one of them upon the north side of a mountain, when it was ten below zero upon the south side?

The corn shop was built in the year of 1886-7 by Burnham & Morrill, and the cans for the first season's pack were made in the old fair building upon the plains the winter and a part of the summer previous. George Marsh was the superintendent, while the can makers were Walter Howard, Fred Glines, George and Wid Ricker, and your humble servant. The first one or two seasons' packs were hauled to Canton by Mart Kilgore with four horse teams, then to market by train.

No doubt there are some of the old shop crew who well remember as well as looked forward for John Burnham to appear on the scene after season was over, with the pay roll. Mr. Burnham was accompanied by no one, except the liveryman, who brought him from Canton after getting off the train. Once in the shop he would dump the whole pay roll out onto a table. Bills of many denominations, silver, coppers, all together. Don't lose your breath when tell you there would be more than a bushel basket full of it, and not a single check would there be.

The next move would be for the timekeeper to announce your name, and you were called up to the table, where Mr. Burnham very quickly made you the proud possessor of a good sized roll. A roll that would go about three times the distance as a roll of same size goes today.

The old brick schoolhouse at the foot of the hill on Weld street, where the teachers did all they could in trying to teach us boys something, and some of these same boys have made good, yet we of course, have not as yet seen a picture of one of the group upon a postage stamp. A few of the teachers were Newton Stowell, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Park, Miss Edith Gates, Miss Addie Peck, Mr. Bryant and Mr. Dunham. In those days the management gave the teachers power to keep order, if, we will say, they possessed the strength along with a little science needed in turning the trick for all the boys went to school winters until they could raise a good moustache. We all wore heavy cowhide, copper toed, long legged boots. The most of us used to chew tobacco, but did not smoke cigarettes, and we were possessed with strength enough so that a bunch of us could almost lift a small schoolhouse. Nevertheless in most cases our strength did not count. And if the old brick schoolhouse were standing I dare say I could show you scratches on some of those old hard wood seats that were made by some of us boys' heavy boots as Albert Park dragged us over the tops of them.

The spool mill was built in the summer of 1887, by George Merrill, Ephraim Reynlds, Frank and John Stanley. The spool machinery came in October of the same year, from Searsport, Maine. The help came at about the same time, and their names were as follows: first, Clifton Webber, engineer; Varney Smith came next, and set up the roughers; then came Henry Richards, he and Smith set up the finishers. Next were Frank Nichols, Prince Colcord, Seth Hammond, Amos Carr, Frank Park, Gus Prescott, Charles Ames and James B. Davis.

Soon as the brick foundation for the smokestack was finished, the management seemed to be at a stand still as to how they were going to erect the thirty foot smokestack into its position upon its base, while some of them mentioned sending to Searsport for a ship builder to do the job. Upon this motion Varney Smith stepped forward and volunteered to furnish the head work if they would furnish him with competent assistants. Varney's liberal offer was very quickly accepted, and the large stack was hoisted to its upright position without a slip, and I think at that time Smith could have easily taken the position as president of the company, at least, for a couple of days. Varney was a close friend of the writer, and a jolly good fellow he was. When last knowing, he was employed as janitor at the Maine Central passenger station at Rumford, Maine.

A machinist by the name of Tucker operated a first class machine shop there in the mill, and Ed. Babb worked for him and learned the trade. Andrew Lang worked there for several years, I think, as a fireman. Andrew has owned for many years a nice piece of property in Ridlonville, Maine, and for a long time been employed in the Oxford mill at Rumford as engineer on a pair of the large twin engines. Of those old hands that came from Searsport before the corner stone was laid for the mill, there are only three of them anywhere in this section at this writing; those are Charles Ames and James Davis of Dixfield, and Varney Smith of Rumford.

Kind readers, let them be old schoolmates, playmates or friends away back in our old home town, whoever comes in contact with this article, which I have tried hard to write a few little items of interest which took place in our younger days back in old Dixfield, the garden spot of America, please speak up boys with at least a few lines through the Advertiser, or in the way of a personal letter to the writer in memory of playing together when boys.

Now last, but by no means least, was the old church on the hill where I attended regular with my dear old mother, in those that were my happy days.

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere,
On the eighteenth of April, in Seventy-five—
Longfellow.

Paul Revere was born in Boston, January, 1735, and in his father's shop learned the trade of gold and silversmith, and later became a proficient copper engraver. He was a leader in that famous Boston tea party and he later induced the Colonists to attack and capture Fort William and Mary at Portsmouth. He was commissioned a major of infantry in the Massachusetts Militia in April, 1776, and later was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel of Artillery and finally received Command of Castle William in Boston Harbor.

In 1795 as Grand Master of the Masonic body he laid the cornerstone of the new State House in Boston.

He died in Boston, May 10, 1818.

BEGINNING today, the New Series Pontiac Big Six marked with a RED ROCKET will be on the streets of this city. Notice its speed, quick getaway, smoothness and easy handling. Ask for a demonstration—anytime, anywhere you see this car.

SPEED AND POWER. A 60 horsepower engine, the largest in any six of Pontiac's price, accounts for this car's great power, speed and acceleration.

SMOOTHNESS. The engine is very smooth due to new type rubber mountings and the Harmonic Balancer which counteracts crankshaft vibration.

EASY HANDLING AND RIDING. A new roller bearing steering system and improved four-wheel brakes make the car delightfully easy to handle. And riding ease is increased by comfortable new Fisher bodies and improved Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers.

Ask to drive the car with the RED ROCKET. Or come to our salesroom and arrange to learn what splendid performance Pontiac now is offering at low cost.

Prices are f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Shock absorbers standard equipment. Bumpers and spring covers at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Funeral Services for Mrs. Walton—Guests at Mrs. Farmer's—Knight Returned from Texas.

Mrs. Ruth Elliott Walton, wife of Leo Walton of Norway, passed away, April 8, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Elliott, where she had spent the winter, since her resignation of her school at Norway, where she was a very successful teacher and greatly loved by her pupils. She was a graduate from Gould Academy, 1916, teaching one year in Bisbeetown, then at Norway Lake and Norway village. Ever since coming here she was just as interested in the children whom she taught and looked at the Advertiser each week to see if their names appeared in it as was customary when she taught them, with 100 rank. She was a great sufferer the last few days she lived, but bore it will all the patience possible. Everything was done for her comfort by her mother and the fine nurse, Mrs. Minnie Saunders, but it seemed her good work was done here and she was called to the great beyond, where her suffering will be no more.

It seemed so hard to leave such a dear little daughter, but she will be tenderly cared for by her grandmother, Mrs. Elliott, who will lead her by the same guiding hand that led her mother to be the kind of woman that this world needs more of. The funeral was held Friday at 2 p. m. at the home and such an abundance of flowers, silent tokens, spoke of the high esteem in which she was held. Rev. B. F. Wentworth officiated and she was laid at rest in Stoneham cemetery.

Remember that the table is a place for good comradship with one's children and not for discipline or nagging. Take it for granted that the child will eat happily everything served to him, and be sure that he becomes acquainted with a variety of foods.

GEORGE H. EASTMAN

A Tribute from An Old Friend

The recent death of George H. Eastman of Center Lovell brought much sorrow to many hearts, not only in the place of his residence, but also in other parts of our land. The summer residents about beautiful Lake Kezar all knew and loved "Uncle George", as they all familiarly and affectionately called him, and no one of them is now without a deep sense of loss, grieving that they shall see his face no more. He was one of the attractions of the place. He was so odd, so unique, in his wise and witty sayings, in his cordial meetings, in his great kindliness of heart and of hand, that he was admired by all.

He was so original in his ways of doing things, that he interested and attracted all with whom he came in contact. No summer visitor who mingled in the life in the community could long be unnumbered among his friends. A stranger to others the visitor might be, but not to "Uncle George". He sought out the newcomer and gave him hearty welcome. He was an outstanding figure in the community, in the Christian Church, in the Sunset Beach Services, on the shore of the lake. His home on the mountain side attracted many callers, who found delight in conversation with this sturdy farmer, so well informed, so genuine, so hospitable, so kindly, and few left the thrifty farmhouse without a goodly supply of vegetables and fruits, in season, and flowers from his garden, in which he took deep delight, especially when placed in appreciative hands.

It was a happy home he had in the Sabattus Country. For fifty-six years, with his much loved wife he had lived there, apart from near neighbors, but never lonely. Uninteruppted happiness reigned within. Only when death called away to the better land, the companion of his life, a year before the "one clear call" came to him, did he leave the old home to live with a brother at the Center.

Among his own people he was much loved and highly esteemed, as a good neighbor, a worthwhile friend, an upright man, a sturdy citizen. Not a few, now in middle life, remembered him as their school teacher and cherished what they had learned at his feet.

Outside of his home and his farm, his chief interest was the church. From public worship he was rarely absent and the minister in the pulpit had a no more attentive listener. He could repeat to the minister the text and chief points of a sermon delivered years before. He used to say that he would rather have a good sermon than attend any norm of entertainment that could be given. His actions proved his words as true. He was a God fearing man, a man of prayer, a devoted Christian. His strong unwavering faith carried him through all the trials and tests of his long life, and through the weary, painful hours of his last struggle, from which he emerged triumphant through God's grace, when his fourscore years on earth gave way to the unnumbered years of the eternal blessedness of Heaven.

It will be one of the regrets of my life that, being far away in the South, I could not sit by his side as he lay upon his bed of pain in the hospital and kneel there in prayer, and that I could not be present at his funeral, to speak a few words from my heart, of his staunch qualities of character, his noble life, his loyal faith.

As it was, I could but wire a message of affection to my dear friend of eighteen summers, upon hearing of his illness, and now I can but send to our County paper this meagre tribute to his memory.—Marcus A. Brownson, Southern Pines, North Carolina.

Pepperell Manufacturing Company vs.

Austin C. Drury, once of Denmark, Oxford County, Maine, whose whereabouts is unknown, and person and persons unknown, who are the legal heirs, legal representatives, grantees, devisees, or assigns of, or who claim, in any other way, by, through or under said Austin C. Drury, et als.

Pepperell Manufacturing Company, a corporation duly created by law and having an established place of business at Biddeford, in the County of York and State of Maine, complains against Austin C. Drury, once of Denmark, Oxford County, Maine, whose whereabouts is unknown, and against the person and persons unknown, who are the legal heirs, legal representatives, grantees, devisees, or assigns of, or who claim, in any other way, by, through or under the said Austin C. Drury, and against all other persons unknown, their heirs, legal representatives, grantees, devisees, or anyone claiming under them, who claim or may claim some right, title, interest, demand, claim to, in or against the property which is described in the first paragraph of this bill, and says:

FIRST: That it is seized in fee simple and in possession of a certain parcel of land in the Town of Denmark, Oxford County, State of Maine, together with the storage dam thereon, located across the outlet of Moose Pond, and the dam privileges connected therewith, and all gates, gate-houses, sluiceways and machinery and all water rights appurtenant to the said dam, namely: Beginning on the northerly side of the road leading from Denmark Town Hall to Fryeburg and at the southwesterly corner of land formerly of Mrs. H. N. Bryant, being the hotel lot and now owned by one C. E. Cobb; thence north thirty-nine (39) degrees thirty-seven (37) minutes east about two hundred and seventy-three (273) feet to the shore of Moose Pond; thence southwesterly by the shore of said pond to the northerly side line of the first parcel set off to Sewall Fly by execution dated December 26, 1856, recorded in said Oxford Registry of Deeds, Book 31, Page 488, thence westerly to an angle in said line; thence northwesterly sixteen (16) rods more or less to the northerly corner of said lot so set off; thence southwesterly fifteen (15) rods more or less, to a point; thence easterly to the road leading to Lovell; thence southerly by said road to its junction with the said road leading to Fryeburg; thence easterly by the last mentioned road to the point of beginning, together with all water rights and water privileges appurtenant to and connected with said premises except as hereinbefore set forth, excepting, however, such rights as the public may have in the said road leading to Lovell across the above described premises, and subject to such water rights, if any, as was conveyed by Barnabas Brackett to Leonard Berry by deed dated October 23, 1839, recorded in Oxford County Registry of Deeds, Western District, Book 20, Page 312.

SECOND: That your complainant claims an estate of free-hold in the whole of said property above described and claims to be the absolute owner in fee simple, excepting the rights of the public in said road as aforesaid, and subject to said water rights as aforesaid.

THIRD: That your complainant and those under whom it claims have been in uninterrupted and continuous possession of said property described in the first paragraph of this bill for more than twenty years next preceding the date of this bill, claiming an estate of freehold therein during all of said time.

FOURTH: That your complainant and those under whom it claims have been in actual, continuous and uninterrupted possession of said property described in the first paragraph of this bill for more than twenty years next preceding the date of this bill, to wit, since 1900, and prior thereto, holding said property by open, exclusive, peaceable, continuous, uninterrupted and adverse possession in their own right, and claiming title thereto in fee simple, excepting that part of said property described in deed from Austin C. Drury to Pepperell Manufacturing Company dated January 9, 1872, and recorded in Oxford Registry of Deeds, Western District, Vol. 58, Page 158, the complainant claiming title thereto by said deed and through various mesne conveyances duly recorded in said Registry, from said Pepperell Manufacturing Company to your complainant.

FIFTH: That said Austin C. Drury or persons unknown, claiming as heirs, devisees or assigns, or in some other way, by, through or under the said Austin C. Drury, may claim some right, title, interest, or estate in the said real estate adverse to your complainant, and requiring the production of evidence to meet said claim, whereby a cloud upon the title of your complainant to said premises is created and the market value thereof depreciated, and the easy sale of the same prevented.

SIXTH: That the whereabouts of the said Austin C. Drury is unknown and cannot be ascertained by reasonable diligence; that the names of all other defendants herein are to your complainant unknown.

WHEREFORE, your complainant respectfully prays:

1. That this Honorable Court may decree that the said defendants and all persons claiming by law under them may be forever enjoined from setting up any claim to the premises described in the first paragraph of this bill.

2. That this Court decree that the complainant is the true, lawful and only owner of the premises described in the first paragraph of this bill.

3. That the complainant may have such other and further relief as the nature of this action may require and as to this Honorable Court may seem meet.

4. That such order of notice be issued by this Honorable Court as to it may seem fit and proper.

During the last thirteen years, records of the U. S. Weather Bureau show that slightly more than 1,400 tornadoes have occurred in the United States, with property loss exceeding $173,000,000 and 3,861 lives lost.

The aggregate loss of lesser windstorms, it is estimated, has doubled the above totals.

OXFORD COUNTY LITERARY UNION

Plans for the annual meeting of the Oxford County Literary Union have been made by Mrs. Celia H. Sturtevant, its founder and president. She has obtained as a speaker Miss Elva Dorr of Norway, whom many heard and liked at the last October session of the Union at Andover. The date is fixed for Monday, May 19, at Bethel Inn, as usual.

Miss Dorr has seen twenty years in California, last year attended the Indian conference at Lake Mohonk, and was in conference with governmental heads on problems relating to the Indians. Her personality is attractive as she is educated and refined.

The Union, which began ten years ago with six clubs, now includes eighteen clubs, seven of which Mrs. Sturtevant organized herself. There also is an individual membership of about twenty women not club members. The privileges of the meeting at Bethel will be extended to anyone interested at nominal fee, as the motto of the club is "Inclusive, not exclusive."

Programs will be sent to clubs later. Plans now call for Miss Dorr's lecture in the forenoon. After luncheon at the Inn, the time will be given to clubwork, talent from the various clubs furnishing entertainment.

Harrison Road

Local Feeling Regarding the Harrison Road

(From Bridgton News)

Harrison will always hold to the idea that it was handed a raw deal when its petition to have the road to Norway, over the Twin Bridges designated a state highway, was turned down by the State Highway Commission. It did not have in mind a hard surfaced road over the entire length of this route at the outset, but it hoped to see such a road eventually. With the designation of the Naples-Poland Corner route as a state highway these hopes went a glimmering. Harrison had the facts and figures on its side, but unfortunately the Casco people had the political pull on theirs and political pull, as it most generally does, won out. The Harrison delegation went to Augusta armed with an imposing array of figures. It showed the Commission that its route would accommodate approximately 10,700 of home people, against 2,600 for the Casco route. It also showed that the valuation of the property affected by their route amounted to $7,231,609, against a valuation of $2,081,620 for the Casco route.

The state tax on property amounted in round numbers to $50,652, against $14,579 for the Casco route. It showed that 595 home people would be accommodated per mile, over the Harrison route as against 173 for the Casco route. The valuation per mile over the Harrison route was $401,756 per mile as against $138,774 over the Casco route and that the state tax per mile over the Harrison route would be $2,814, as against $972 per mile over the Casco route. These figures were of course based on the tax and the valuation as of the date when the petition was filed. All the argument seemed to be on the side of the Harrison route—and yet Casco got the road, which was commenced two years ago, and which is being constructed at a tremendous cost.

It is only about 12 miles across to Norway from Harrison and yet ever since the frost commenced coming out of the ground it has been easier to go down the Roosevelt Trail to North Windham, across to the cement road at Gray Corner and from there up over the Shaker Village road to Poland Corner, a terribly roundabout way to reach Norway. The road across from Naples to Poland Corner, of course, accommodates the people of Casco Village and of Webbs Mills, but outside of that it is practically a tourist road, built to accommodate the guests of Poland Springs, enroute to the White Mountains, who would be fully as well taken care of had the Harrison petition been acted upon favorably. Harrison isn't a bit envious of Casco and Webbs Mills. In fact it is glad that they stand to get a hard surfaced road over this route, but it does feel a little sore that the petition of Bridgton, Harrison, Norway and South Paris was turned down as it was, because it cannot get the idea out of its head that somebody double crossed them and there are people in Harrison who would not require three guesses as to who it was.

Judge C. F. Whitman's Story

Will Begin in Next Week's Issue—Characters Appear in a Massachusetts Setting

We shall begin the publication next week in the Advertiser of Judge Whitman's story: "The Rise of Tom Talley". Although the scene of events is laid in Massachusetts, the story will be illustrated pictorially by Maine people. This is a unique feature as stories are usually embellished with fancy cuts to represent events.

A governor of Maine will impersonate the governor of Massachusetts.

Magistrates of local fame will be present the two in the story. The two principal young men, Tom and Charley, and the two young ladies of note, Maud and Betty, will be recognized by Norway and South Paris people. These four will occupy the front of the stage to the last. The originals of Maud and Betty are extremely good looking, but Betty is to be seen to be the star so far as the interest in the narrative goes.

There are four young boys, Bob, Jack, Victor and Ned and four young ladies, Bessie, Mary, Alice Marian and Bel, all pupils in school, in whom there will be much interest in what they do and say. The clergyman of the story will be one of Norway's ministers, and the old hunter will be recognized as the one "who has made Henry Ford famous," according to Don. The man who has done so much for Norway, will have an important part in accomplishing some desired measures for the two leading characters while serving as an influential member of the Massachusetts Legislature. It's a clean story, with sensational features and such as was representative of New England life a generation or so ago. Judge Whitman regards it as his best production. It is a singular fact that the outlines of it were formed in his mind while lying on his cot with his eyes bandaged at the Eye and Ear Infirmary at Portland, after an operation to remove cataracts from his eyes.

Those much interested in the story should save the papers containing the first chapter as we might not be able to supply the demand for back numbers.
